On April 25, 1958, the Immigration and Naturalization Service advised our Honolulu Office that [redacted]

[redacted] was to be admitted to the United States on a waiver of inadmissibility to speak at a convention of the Fund for the Republic (FFR) in New York City during May, 1958. [redacted]

Based on the above information, on May 1, 1958, the New York Office was telephonically requested to ascertain the nature of the alleged FFR convention and telephonically advised the same day that it was not a convention but a conference to be held May 9-11, 1958, at Arden House, Harriman, New York. The conference will be a seminar on the Fund's Labor Union Project of its Basic Issues Program. Attendance will be by invitation only and approximately 75 persons are expected. The number is restricted because of the small capacity of Arden House. Persons in attendance will be experts or people well qualified to discuss labor and labor-management problems.

The Fund's Basic Issues Program is a study of how certain U.S. institutions affect individual freedom in the United States. The labor union, the industrial corporation, and the Government's defense program are some of these institutions.

It is not deemed advisable that coverage of this conference be attempted since it is felt the results would not justify the risk.
